Nagasaki【Nagasaki Peace Park & Atomic Bomb Museum / Twenty-Six Martyrs Monument / Dejima / Oura Church / Glover Garden】

Today, we head to Nagasaki, first to visit the city's most important landmark: the Nagasaki Peace Park. Created in the aftermath of nuclear explosion during World War 2, the Nagasaki Peace Park features an inspirational Peace Statue, a Hypocenter Monument at the point of impact, the remains of the former Urakami Cathedral, and a collection of Peace memorials donated from countries around the world. Near the park is the Atomic Bomb Museum built in remembrance to the events and victims of the nuclear attack on the city during WW2, with sobering photos of the city's devastation and preserved accounts from the survivors. We go from there to the Twenty-Six Martyrs Monument, which remembers the lives and deaths of 26 Catholic martyrs who were executed in Nagasaki on the orders of Toyotomi Hideyoshi. We go from there to the man-made island of Dejima. Originally a Dutch trading station, it contained the only Westerners permitted in Japan during the Edo period. Many of its historic structures are of elegant European architecture, with refined interior décor. Then visit Oura Church, built at the end of the Edo period in 1864 by a French missionary. This is considered the oldest standing Christian church in Japan. At the end of the day, we stroll around Glover Garden, an open-air museum which includes a pretty flower garden, the old Glover Estate, and other Western-style residences and buildings. They depict the affluent lives of the wealthy foreign merchants who moved to the Japan after the country opened to foreign trade.
